

Helen 10X

Autobiography

I remember listening to Green Day's 7th studio album, American Idiot, in primary school, although I didn't know anything else about them then. My friends came over one Saturday night, and we were all watching TV, when their Holiday video came up on the screen. Naturally they turned it up, and starting singing to it. As it was a couple of years younger, I was still listening to those pop bands like McFly... So when my mates asked me if I liked it, I didn't lie and said I did. They jumped up and said "Yes, Helen likes Green Day!", and it was true, it was an amazing song. Ok, so I finally got the CD of their album quite a bit after, when I had realised that I couldn't get all their songs off the Internet for free. My other friend copied the CD for me, and as soon as I got home, I put it on. I found the lyrics on the Internet, and while playing Neopets, American Idiot was on repeat on my CD player. My God it was a good album, I had learnt all the words to every song in just over 1 month, and were singing them at school. Some guy called Calum in my class also had the CD, but he said that his mom didn't let him see the lyrics, because they were too inappropriate, so when I starting to sing the song ST Jimmy, he held his ears and said "nooo". And today, right now typing this, they are still my favourite band, after 5 years of listening to them, and I think they will be my number one forever.